THE SINGER AGAIN TRIUMPHANT.

I RESPECTFULLY request all parties wishing to purchase a Sewing Machine, to give these sales of 1874 and 1875, a careful reading, for there can be no better criterion to go by than the sales of the machines that are now on the market. You will see that the long-tried and world-renowned Singer has left all others far behind it. I have, as most of you know, been selling this machine for the last five years in this country, and am today a much stronger advocate for it than I was the day I took hold of it. I have sold over 500 hundred machines in this country, that are giving perfect satisfaction.

PREPARE, OH! PREPARE!

The time is near at hand when the subtle and vivid lightning will cast its devastating breath upon the dwellings of the defenceless. Yours may be the first to go. Then prepare to avert such a calamity, by sending in your orders for the celebrated COPPER LIGHTNING ROD To BYRUM & McGRATH, who are ready to put them up at the shortest notice.

So, to make my credit more, I'll go beyond the letter; Love my neighbor as myself? For she's sweeter than the breath Of the spring that passes Through the fragrant, budding woods, O're the meadow grasses.

ABOUT FLIES.

House Flies, Sand Flies, Time Flies, and Other Flies.

As the season of final examinations and graduation exercises is in full blast, many of our readers may be interested in the following composition which has been handed us by one of our educational friends. It is credited to a spirited young lady of a Georgia High School, and was read before a large audience, with marked effect.

What horrid things flies are! Everybody hates them because they always give us so much annoyance just when we are most anxious not to be annoyed. They seem to be intended specially to worry us in this life and make us more ready for an exchange to something better when the time comes for us to leave it.

The Bible does not tell us that there are any flies in Heaven, but speaks of it as a place of perfect happiness; and this could not possibly be true if any flies are to be found there. It tells us, though, that when the people of Egypt were visited with ten plagues as a punishment for their wickedness, one of these was the plague of flies. They had flies in their houses and temples, flies at the tops of the pyramids and in the bottom of the wells, flies in their hair, and ears, and eyes, and faces, and undersleeves, and hats, and bonnets, and chignons; flies buzzing around and biting them by day and by night; they could scarcely see anything but flies, until at last some were blinded by them, and thus partly comforted by not seeing them any more. They would dream about flies as long as it was possible to sleep at all; on waking, the first sound was the music of ten million flies, steady and noisy as the chatter of a class of girls just before the tapping of the bell.

Whenever two Egyptian girls wanted to kiss each other a fly was sure to come in the way. Whenever a flirtation was carried on, and the young man was about to say something very sweet, a fly brushed past and took it off the end of his tongue. Oh, what unhappiness! It makes one sigh to think of it.

We are more blessed than those ancient Egyptians, but we see enough of flies to know the tortures that must have been suffered from them. Who has not been waked at sunrise by a fly that wanted to make friends with him, crawling delicately over his hands and face and neck, gazing into his ear, as if it were a picture gallery or a set of Madame Jarley's wax figures, then suddenly buzzing off to alight upon his nose? The sleeper awakes, but the sunlight has no beauty for him just then, and he tosses his head to the other side to enjoy the rest of the happy dreams which had been so rudely interrupted. But, under a mistaken idea of devotion, the active fly "sticketh closer than a brother," and crawlth to the second picture gallery, with the intention of buzzing again to the guileless nose; then flirts off in time to escape the cordial slap that follows. Again the sleeper awakes, but his dream is gone; and he cannot say his morning prayers, find his Bible, he reads of "the wicked fly whom no man pursueth," and wonders why it was not written "the wicked fly" instead of the wicked flea.

There are many different kinds of flies. Cross-eyed people, who love to study about strange things and delight in hard words, give them a host of names that we girls cannot remember; names that make us think about the Greek alphabet, and the shorter caecidism, and the Egyptian hieroglyphics, because we do not understand them very well. Common names have been given to some kinds though, for we all know of house-flies, blue-bottle flies, sand-flies, horse-flies, yellow-flies, shoo-flies and time-flies.

Of all these kinds, the last is the one about which we hear most. The name that the cross-eyed people give it is "Tempus fugit." I know this name, because I heard my teacher say it, and then call out "Time-flies." I looked around to see where they were; but as I did not see them, they must be very small, and very swift when they are passing. Even their buzzing cannot be heard, and they do not bite; yet they seem to be the very worst of all flies, or at least the grown people think so, if the girls do not.

Whenever we want to sleep late on Sunday morning our mothers wake us just at the wrong moment, talk about time-flies, and say the church-bell is ringing. Whenever we are drawing pictures upon our slates, the teacher scowls at us, talks about time-flies, and asks if we know the arithmetic lesson. Whenever our older sisters have young gentlemen in the parlor with them, they speak in a great hurry about time-flies, and tell us to go to bed; but they never say a word about such insects to the young gentlemen. Our fathers always seem uneasy, and look at their watches, and whisper about time-flies during the sermon at church. Somehow they never do so at the dinner table, it is always the house-flies, or the shoo-flies, that they want to drive away then.

I have never known school girls to talk about time-flies, yet they do talk about a great many odd things. It is always the grown people who seem to be troubled about these insect creatures. They worry ourselves cannot perceive them. Therefore, time-flies must be like getting married; one must be grown up before it is proper to think about such things.

—The other day a gentleman was asked if the "Yankees were sincere in their centennial sentiments?" His reply was: "Just as sincere as the Southern people are." Ahem!

—The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes: "It is very gratifying to record that for the first time in the long period of the ten years which have elapsed since the close of the war those who sit in high places exhibit no disposition to stir up political feeling against the South. This is the first Summer since 1865 that this city has not been made the headquarters for the dissemination all over the country of the most malignant slanders upon the Southern people. It seems safe to say that this unhappy business is at last at an end. The Southern people must have some feeling of this kind, for all the intelligence which comes here from that section represents the aspect of business affairs as most hopeful."

—It is stated that Barnwell County has a genuine case of Siamese Twins. We are informed that a woman in that county recently gave birth to two children who are joined together by a ligature very closely resembling that which united the bodies of Chang and Eng. At last accounts, the twins were alive and doing "as well as could be expected."

—Why is a pig the most prodigious of animals? Because he always carries a spare-rib or two about him.

REAL ESTATE AGENCY.

ANDERSON COUNTY, JUNE 7, 1875. THE undersigned have this day entered into copartnership under the name and style of R. W. SIMPSON & CO., for the purpose of buying and selling Real Estate upon commission, and have opened an office at Westleton, in Dr. Maxwell's Brick Building, and at Anderson C. H., in Hoyt & Co.'s Printing Office.

THE STOCKINGS OF THE PERIOD.—The Paris shops are full of the most fanciful designs in this one detail of feminine attire. They are made in cream color, lemon color, orange yellow, straw color, pink, pale blue, pale green, lilac, light brown, dark brown, crimson, scarlet, purple—in short, in every shade of every color. But the precise tint is only half the question; the designs worked upon the stockings are by far the most important part of it, as regards fashion, and these are of the most varied description. One pair of the stockings which excited much admiration from the passers of a certain well-known shop in Paris was in lemon color, and the instep of each foot was covered with bunches of black currants, with their twigs and leaves, most delicately embroidered in the colored silks.

Another example of ornamentation lay close at hand, in the form of a black silk stocking, round the leg of which a garland of pink roses and leaves winding upward from the ankle was exquisitely embroidered. This last fashion is very popular just now. Stockings so embroidered are, of course, enormously dear. Few women can afford to buy many such expensive articles of dress as these garlanded stockings; therefore it becomes a matter of eager competition among the leaders of fashion to secure as many specimens of the latest rage as their purses will allow. The mania is instilled, and henceforth the woman of the world takes rank according to her stockings. Garlands of flowers do not hold the field alone, it must be observed. In some cases inscriptions and devices are embroidered round the legs of the modern stockings, and rows and patterns are worked in colored silk stars or spots. The ground, however, of all this work must, on no account, be white.—Home Journal.

HOTEL LIFE IN THE CITY OF MEXICO.—Everything in the way of living is cheap in Mexico. Of course prices range higher in the capital than elsewhere, but even there the hotels, for instance, furnish excellent rooms at from $20 to $50 per month. At the Hotel Turbide the rooms are very large, and usually divided by curtains, so as to make a parlor and a bedroom. For $30 a month you can procure one of these apartments, handsomely furnished and efficiently attended. The scheme of the hotel extends no further. Your bath and your meals are outside affairs. On the ground floor of the Hotel Turbide is an excellent French restaurant and a very good bath house. These are separate establishments. The price of the bath is two reals (twenty-five cents), and at the restaurant two persons can contract for meals at $7.50 each per week. The Gran Tivoli is arranged as a park, with lovely grounds, fountains, streams, and flowers in profusion. The dining places are scattered about here and there: Chinese pagodas, Swiss cottages, French chalets in miniature, you choose the retreat which pleases you the most. It is here that you find the great tree, on one of whose branches is a pretty little cabin, to which you ascend by a spiral stairway, if you prefer dining so far from mother earth. I believe it will be conceded by all who have partaken of the menu of the Gran Tivoli that a better cooked, better served, and more elegantly appointed dinner could hardly be found anywhere in the world. The cooks are of the finest Parisian schools, the wines genuine, and the accessories fascinating.—New Orleans Picayune.

ELEVATE THE MIND.—Raise the mind to a higher standard, and to a certain extent the features are compelled to go with it. How different are the faces of even the most stupid under the influence of pleasurable excitement, or a just and generous indignation or wrong! you can scarcely recognize them as the same people. Elevation of mind imparts grace and dignity to form and features; but of all sentiments, benevolence to our fellow men, is one of the best. We defy any woman to relieve a starving family in person, or administer sympathy and consolation to a suffering and look altogether ugly. Observe enthusiastic persons in their moments of inspiration—even ardent lovers of science in their description of a new discovery, or conjectures regarding a new system, and then turn to some inanimate regular beauty, who listens to them as unmoved as a statue, and ask yourself candidly which is the real essence of beauty, the form or the expression.

—Rowell's Newspaper Directory shows the failure of one thousand newspapers in this country during the past year, the loss to publishers, subscribers and advertisers amounting to over eight million dollars. Among those who went into the newspaper business and lost heavily thereby were 275 merchants and adventurers, 315 school teachers, 57 lawyers, 4 blacksmiths, 23 plasterers, 10 farmers, 200 fanatics of various classes afflicted with literary leanings, 100 ambitious, but visionary men, who drew upon their fathers and thus suddenly exhausted large margins of the paternal capital, and 6 lottery men.

—The other day a gentleman was asked if the "Yankees were sincere in their centennial sentiments?" His reply was: "Just as sincere as the Southern people are." Ahem!
